

build up the Church as a ding the good news of the he Charleston Ward. Even ve been called to the labor y mission field in the world.

on residents, and the estab-
n by early settlers.

ter the Black Hawk Indian
ght school in a log home.
l winters in George Brown's y and the McAfee's.

onths during the winter, and son, payable by the parents ney could spare. Cash pay-g a good education, taught By 1873 the community was r began. George Smith and gone to Salt Lake City to

ool. In the one-room frame on hinges, so they could be be used for socials or other of the room. In the center s sat.

Mr. Brown included Richard ers from outside the valley
. Terry from Draper in Salt sin.

d in 1902 and still in use.

A Charleston School graduating class of about 1902-03. Pictured are, seated, left to right, Sadie Brown and Mima Wright. Standing are Josie Murdock, Lorena Brown and Mattie North.

By 1889 the community had outgrown the small school and a stone structure was erected. This building later became the town hall. Teachers in this building included William Hanks, Joseph R. Murdock, Charles Wahlquist, William Ryan and Alva Murdock. When the Mutual Improvement Association built the amusement and dance hall in 1891 they allowed it to be used for school classes also. Some teachers in this building were Charles Wahlquist, Alva Murdock, Lucy Baker, Dacy Baker, Ed Morton, George Barzee, John M. Ritchie, David A. Broadbent, Joseph Jacobs, James Ritchie and Lavina Baker.

The present school building was erected in 1902 when the school district was bonded for $20,000. Principals in this school have included David A. Broadbent, Sylvester Broadbent, E. L. Cropper, Charles Madsen, Clifford Madsen, Lee Kay and Arthur Bjorkman.

During the years others have conducted classes in their homes or taught special courses for a short time. Some of these have been Sina Murdock Brown, Sarah Bromley, John McAfee and Lottie Murdock.

Teachers who were regularly employed at the Charleston School from 1915 until the school consolidated in 1951 were Charles H. Madsen, William W. Armstrong, Ruth and Ruby Gottfredson, Mary Urie, Clifford L. Madsen, Lucille Fronk, Delilia Tye, Maud Hamblin, Ida Wright, Louise Hansen, Ruby Bronson, June Tye, Jessie Armstrong, Elda Dorius, Orpha Dorius, Lelia Phillips, Millie Wright, Clarence Probst, Fern Wad-